L. Participation in grants

Major external research funding received

MISTRA Environmental Communication – Reframing communication for sustainability

- Funding: Swedish Foundation for Strategic Environmental Research (Mistra), Sweden (international external funding)
- Budget: SEK 60,5 million
- Duration: 4 years (starting December 2019)
- Position: Participating researcher
- Project Directors: Prof. Anke Fischer (EC-SLU) and Dr Eva Friman (Uppsala University), Sweden

The project aims to reframe environmental communication, i.e., to mainstream an advanced and inclusive understanding of environmental communication in research, policy and practice such that it can effectively underpin and foster sustainability transformations. The project addresses five major fields of environmental communication practice: (i) government-led dialogue, (ii) consumption, (iii) science and knowledge co-production, (iv) organisational networks in market contexts and (v) arts and the media. The programme draws on a transdisciplinary approach that involves researchers from a range of disciplinary backgrounds as well as non-academic partners representing crucial actors in wider society to harness existing thinking, co-develop new insights and approaches and translate these into communication practice.

Community media's contribution to conflict transformation in Cyprus

- Funding: Fund for Scientific Research (FWO), Belgium (international external funding)
- Budget: € 360,000
- Duration: 2014- 2018
- Position: Project co-supervisor
- Project supervisor: Professor Nico Carpentier, VUB, Belgium

Community media have been studied extensively in the past decades, but their role in conflict transformation hardly received any academic attention. Focusing on the divided island of Cyprus, the main research question of this project is how the representations of the political and the social, and the organisation of participation by community media can contribute to a shift from antagonism to agonism within the Cypriot public space.

Conflict and violence in Cypriot television: New journalistic forms and practices for mediating conflict and violence in the Cypriot public sphere

- Funding: Cyprus Research Promotion Foundation (national external funding)
- Budget: € 119,412.50
- Duration: 2012-2014
- Position: Project director

This project aimed at (a) studying the ways and conventions by which conflict and violence is portrayed in Cypriot television news, (b) familiarizing journalists and citizens with an 'open society' approach towards conflict and violence, and (c) developing new skills and attitudes among journalists and citizens regarding the use of internet for creating participatory forms of journalism, and actively engaging the public in public expression and discussion through the media in social issues entailing conflict and violence.

Major internal research funding received

Media, news and journalists on the internet

- Funding: CUT, Start-up grant (internal funding)
- Budget: € 85,000
- Duration: 2011-2014
- Position: Project director

This research project had a triple focus: on news organizations, on journalists, and on the product of their work, news. Within this research endeavor, the challenges news organizations are facing and the drastic modifications they are undergoing in the light of convergence dynamics, were studied. At the same time, it was investigated how the tasks, roles, self-perception and professional cultures of journalists are (re)appropriated in the internet era. Thirdly, it was examined how the practices related to this new reality are reflected into the news product.

Representations of the economic crisis in the news

- Partial funding: € 3,800, Department of Communication and Internet Studies (CIS), Cyprus University of Technology (CUT) (internal funding)
- Duration: 2012 - 2015
- Position: Project director

This research project studied the media's representations of the economic crises in Greece and in Cyprus, focusing on how the domestic legacy press framed the discussion on the bailout agreements the two countries signed with the troika. The analysis points to a restrictive, fragmented, decontextualised discourse, where critical elements of the crisis are omitted, and where the governmental and the troika's policies are legitimized by the media coverage of the bailout-related news, through a set of discursive mechanisms.

Worlds of Journalism Study (WJS) (www.worldsofjournalism.org) - Cyprus

- Partial funding: € 3,500, CIS Department, CUT (internal funding)
- Duration: 2010-2014
- Position: Participating researcher
- Representative of Cyprus: Milioni Dimitra, CUT

WJS is an international research network founded to study comparatively journalism cultures on a global scale (Director: Prof. Thomas Hanitzsch, University of Munich) and is a joint effort of researchers from more than 80 countries. The project's main objective is to develop the conceptual and methodological tools to study journalism cultures across countries. The CIS department joined the network, conducting a national study on Cypriot journalism.

Foreign correspondence in Cyprus

- Partial funding: € 3,500, CIS Department (internal funding)
- Duration: 2012-2013
- Position: Principal researcher

The research project on the foreign correspondents in Cyprus was part of a pan-European study that involved researchers and academics from 27 countries. Being the first of its kind, it aimed at the mapping of foreign correspondents and their reporting in Europe in terms of human geography, of working conditions, as well as of the factors and forces that affect news coverage in Europe and for Europe, in a period of rapid and radical changes for journalism.

World Internet Project (WIP)-Cyprus

- Funding: CUT (internal funding); Budget: € 70,000
- Duration: 2008-2012
- Position: Participating researcher (2010-2011)
- Project Director: Milioni Dimitra, CUT

WIP-Cyprus is part of the World Internet Project. Founded by the USC Annenberg School Center for the Digital Future in the United States, in 1999, the WIP (<http://worldinternetproject.net/#about>), which currently involves 37 countries around the world, explores the impact of the internet on society, on comparative and cross-cultural ground.
